

As Doctoral students, we know how difficult it is to motivate yourself and to free time for your thesis. We therefore propose a full day dedicated to your doctoral work, three times during the month of March. This initiative is part of a collective and united approach inspired by the Quebec association Thèsez-vous.

What is the objective?

Meet with other PhD students for 6 periods of individual work in one day. This could be an opportunity to dedicate a whole day to advance your thesis individually, surrounded (virtually or not) by young researchers just like you. The multiple parallel commitments of the thesis are thus set aside for a day to focus essentially on the thesis work. Everything is allowed: writing, reading articles, transcribing, etc.!

What's in it for me?

- A new working framework
- Precise and supervised working ranges
- A pleasant and studious atmosphere
- The opportunity to exchange with other PhD students who share the same problems as you
- A collective emulation
